Your blog post can be written as if it's from the perspective of someone else or from your own perspective. Each paragraph will lead into another to create continuity within the narrative. This is different from an essay where each paragraph would stand on its own and not necessarily weave seamlessly into the next paragraph. A blog post is a great way to promote your products because you are directly talking to the potential prospects yourself. You can easily leave a comment or question that will lead into more conversation related to your product /brand. It is important that the format of your blog post is clean with white space. Avoid having too much visual clutter for the readership will get distracted and may not read what you have written. As mentioned in an earlier tip, you can also use attached images or banner ads in the sidebar of your blog posts which will help convert visitors into subscribers. #4: Blog Post Formatting and Promotional Ideas for Blogs The following tips on how to write a blog post are for informational purposes only. This is not an exhaustive list of what to post about but writing blog posts on the following topics would be great for getting people to subscribe or sign up for your newsletter. How-To Posts : These are the most popular type of posts that readers want to read. How-to posts need to have a clear, unambiguous title that tells readers exactly what the post is about. Keep in mind that not all methods for how-to are suitable. If you are suppose to be giving advice or sharing something new or different, make sure it's up-to-date and accurate. : These are the most popular type of posts that readers want to read.
